Where to Get Maps Good maps are in general extraordinarily easy to obtain. Even the small-scale maps distributed free by gas stations are generally pretty good. Sectional maps, particularly those government publications, are inexpensive in the extreme. Furthermore, most suppliers will furnish upon request free detailed lists of exactly what they have available.

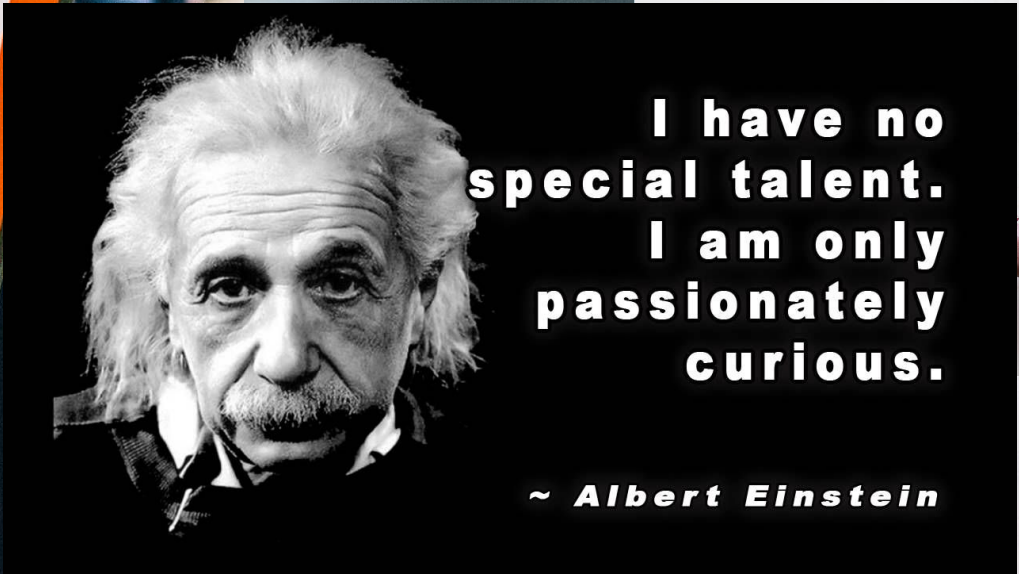

Maps of those portions of the United States from the Mississippi River may be secured from the U. S. Geological Survey, in Washington, DC. For maps of areas west of Washington contact the U. S. Geological Survey, Federal Center, Denver, Colorado.

The maps of national forest areas, with the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, Washington, DC. Maps of the Great Lakes and connecting waters may be obtained from the U. S. Lake Survey, Federal Building, Detroit, Michigan.

Canadian maps may be secured from provincial public offices located in the various provinces in Ottawa, and from the Map Distribution Office, Department of Mines and Technical Surveys, which is also located in Ottawa, Ontario.

For governmental maps of Mexico, write: Dirección de Geografía y Meteorología, Tacamarcos, D. F., Mexico. Two private sources for foreign maps are: The National Geographical Society, International Map Company, Washington, D.C., and the International Map Company, 90 West Street, New York, N.Y.

Why contour maps are preferable Contour maps are by far the most valuable for wilderness use, indicating as they do valleys, canyons, mountains, and other such geographical features in terms of elevations. Consulting such maps in strange country can save one an exhausting amount of unnecessary climbing, descending, and then scaling again. Timing by compass in a straight line, even when possible, is often not advisable. In mountainous terrain, for example, we soon learn that on more than one occasion both time and strength can be conserved by circling several miles along an open ridge instead of striking a small fraction of the distance straight across a deep ravine to the one destination.

It's Not About YOU.
Stay Humble!

Being humble means recognizing that we are not on earth to see how important we can become, but to see how much difference we can make in the lives of others
